1. Sport Models

Analyze the ways in which cultural, economic, and historical factors shape various sports systems around the world. Examine how these influences affect the global sports industry, highlighting both commonalities and distinctions among different models. Discuss the implications of these differences for the global development of sports, using specific examples of sports systems to illustrate your points.

The word count should be 700.

2. Governance in sport

Evaluate the roles and responsibilities of national sports organizations (such as the Norwegian Confederation of Sports, NIF) and international bodies (including the International Olympic Committee, IOC, the World Anti-Doping Agency, WADA, and various international sports federations) in overseeing and regulating global sports. Explore how these organizations collaborate and interact to shape policies, ensure compliance, and promote the development of sports on a global scale.

The word count should be 1150.

3. Stakeholders in international sport

Examine the interactions between international sports organizations and their stakeholders, focusing on how these relationships shape policy-making processes and contribute to the enforcement of fair play and ethical standards in global sports governance. Assess the influence of various stakeholders, such as athletes, national sports federations, sponsors, and governments, on the effectiveness and accountability of these organizations in maintaining integrity within the governance of global sports.

The word count should be 1150.
